Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Vol. 28: January, 1937 The year 1901, therefore, is a suitable date for the beginning of a history of the modern era in photography, and it was in that year that Dr. S. E. Sheppard and the author started the study of photographic science at University College, London. The technical methods of photography used at that time depended upon the use of gelatin dry plates, mostly of the blue-sensitive type, without any dye sensitizing, although a certain proportion of so-called ortho chromatic plates sensitized with erythrosine were in general use. Most photographers having any pretention to skill and interest in their work developed their own plates, although the time when a photographer would attempt to make his own plates was already long past. Prints were usually made by the printing-out processes, which required long exposure to daylight; bromide paper was widely used for enlargements. Skilled and enthusiastic photographers made many of their prints on platinum paper and on carbon tissue, which gave very beautiful prints of great permanence. The carbon process and...
