To have a little fun I called the porter. I looked at him steadily for a couple of minutes, and with one stroke of my hand made white the black ened face of William Gaddis. He told me a long tale of woe about having to take this job to get to New Orleans where he expected to raise snow balls for the southern children and become rich. Just. Then an, important looking man, in the person of Henry Weghorst, laid a hand on William s shoulder and said, You ve played enough today, William, you must come to your compartment with me. On the side Henry told me that William had lost his mind over a checker game and was being taken to an asylum in New Orleans. He only imagined he was a porter on the train. After hearing of this sad case, I could not think of the joke I had started to play, so went to sleep. After being asleep for about five minutes I was suddenly awakened by a voice...
