Excerpt: . . . locating them in the name of Whatley, located them for Wliatley alone, and while in his employment as overseer, and in the charge of his business in Arkansas, Whatley being himself at the times of the locating, in Georgia, where he then resided. Other matters are asserted in the bill as ancillary to, or explanatory of its main feature, as above depicted, and especially as to Vhatleys giving his sister, Strongs wife, a quarter section, or three quarter sections of land; but this, and that part of the case touching the state of accounts between the parties. as affected by Strongs use of VVhatleys negroes, by his working and incurring expenses upon his lands, by living from their proceeds, and by the settlement stated in the answer, and exhibited with it. need not be considered until it is ascertained whether any agreement was made between the parties on which to support a decree for specifie performance. If this be answered in the affirmative, it may then be the subject of enquiry whether the agreement, that is taken to be established, be such as chancery will specifically perform, and if not illegal by the statute of frauds, whether it so commends itself to the discretion of a court of equity as to procure its enforcement, and also, whether, if not enforced, as asked by the bill, the bill will be retained for an award of compensation to Strong for his location of the lands. William...
