Reviews

It becomes an awesome publication that I actually have actually read. It really is written in simple terms and not difficult to understand. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

NOTE ON DAS AND WAS In the Decennial Publications of the University of Chicago (1902) there appeared an article by Professor Starr Willard Cutting Concerning the Modern German Relatives Das and Was, in Clauses Dependent upon Substantivized Adjectives. Professor Cutting investigated the usage of Hauptmann, Heyse, Keller, Meyer, Nietzsche, Raabe, Schopenhauer, Spielhagen, Sudermann, and Wildenbruch, in all 7, 368 pages of text. In connection with some other investigations of Heines grammatical usage the writer of the present article has also recorded his usage of das and was in clauses dependent upon substantivized adjectives, and offers the article as a contribution to the study of this question. All of Heines prose works as contained in the Elster edition, in all 2, 360 pages of text, have been examined and all the instances of his usage of das and was recorded. Heine is above all a careful writer and a glance at his manuscript as prepared for the publishers shows very careful and painstaking correction. All through his writings we feel that he uses words with a full realization of their exact value and, in a question such as the one we are considering, we have good reason to believe that he reflects very well the usage of the first half of the nineteenth century. For convenience in reference and comparison the cases found in Heine are divided as in Professor Cuttings article into the following groups: I. Wos-clauses: a) After superlatives (or alles or einzig). b)...
