Heart disease, Alzheimers, and various cancers are just some of the many diseases that have inflammation as their root cause. But what makes inflammation so bad? Inflammation, on the surface of our body looks red and swollen and causes heat and pain. This is the bodys natural way of fighting infections. It brings nourishment and more immunity to the site. However, when inflammation persists without serving a specific purpose, it damages the body and causes illness. Overtime, the illness may become severe and lead to a life-threatening disease. Inflammation can be caused...
