

The New Negro of the Harlem Renaissance in the Poems of Claude McKay

By Victoria Schneider

GRIN Verlag. Paperback. Condition: New. 52 pages. Dimensions: 8.3in. x 5.8in. x 0.1in. Seminar paper from the year 2011 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies - Literature, grade: 2, 3, University of Potsdam, course: African American Literature, language: English, abstract: Introduction At the beginning of the 20th century, the black population had to assess that they became the plaything of history and they did not have a bearing on their position in society. First of all, the African-Americans had to change their self-conception and their self-perception to achieve a special position in society as an individual. In these years, the black intellectuals were profoundly convinced that the new awareness of the Negro would mark a Renaissance in the history of the African-Americans. The discovery respectively the awareness about personal values, the newfound self-confidence on the one hand and the search for respect and appreciativeness on the other hand formed the base to create a new identity of the black population. Associated processes in politics, arts and especially in literature mobilized the creative strengths of many artists who lived primarily in Harlem at that time. At the beginning of this work, I want to look at theories about the term...

READ ONLINE

[8.98 MB]

Reviews

A fresh eBook with a brand new standpoint. It can be rally exciting throug looking at period of time. I am delighted to inform you that this is the greatest book i have read throug during my individual existence and may be he very best publication for ever.

-- Era Thompson

This written ebook is fantastic. It is probably the most incredible ebook we have read. Its been written in an extremely basic way in fact it is just following i finished reading this publication where basically modified me, affect the way i think.

-- Howell Reichel